He has worked in all major treatment settings ranging from community based, partial hospitalization, intensive inpatient, inpatient, secured wards, outpatient and in prison mental health services. This training and experience includes clients in age ranges from kindergarten to late adulthood. Training in components of treatment such as intake and assessment, interventions, case management, treatment and discharge planning as well as other treatment related experiences will be provided in supervision. Dr. Corson can provide supervision in these areas as well as to provide training in counselor education and supervision.

Dr. Corson's training in supervision includes Doctoral and post Masters Programs in Counselor education and supervision, supervised supervision in his doctoral program as well as supervision presentations at the national, regional, and local levels. Dr. Corson has experience providing individual and group supervision with counselors. In addition, he has experience in individual and group supervision of counselors-in-training working with clients in many differing treatment settings.

Dr. Corson approaches supervision from a collaborative framework. The general areas that receive attention in supervision include the supervisee's professional behaviors, counseling skills, personal awareness, and client/case conceptualization. Supervisory roles assumed by Dr. Corson include teacher, evaluator, consultant, and counselor. Dr. Corson follows a developmental approach to supervision primarily using the teacher role with novice supervisees and consultation with more experienced supervisees. Live observation and case reporting may be utilized in the supervision process. Dr. Corson considers intentionality to be paramount in work as a counselor. As such, he works with supervisees to become aware of the thoughts and feelings that occur with respect to the counseling relationship and process. Facilitating this awareness, including attention to the motivation behind interventions, is an important aspect of his work.

Dr. Corson addresses the issue of evaluation as a fundamental component of supervision. He believes that evaluation is an ongoing process that is linked to care for the client, as well as the goals of the supervisee. All evaluation criteria are introduced at the beginning of the supervisory relationship, serve as training objectives, and are used throughout the process as a basis for ongoing feedback. While evaluation and feedback is embedded in the process, periodic attention, including written feedback, addressing the supervisee's progress is important. In the academic setting, this occurs at the mid-point and end of the semester. Supervisees are asked to provide their own self-evaluation as well. Supervisees are also asked to evaluate Dr. Corson as well as the supervision process.

Dr. Corson is aware of the responsibility he has to the supervisee and the clients in the supervisee's care. The general limits of confidentiality and privileged communication are when harm to self or others is clear and imminent, when child abuse, elderly abuse or abuse of persons with disabilities is suspected, or if court proceedings compel the supervisor to testify. Within the academic setting, confidentiality is not withheld if there is compelling evidence that the supervisee is impaired or unable to provide competent counseling services. In such instances, other faculty members are informed and the procedures established by the program are initiated. Dr. Corson carries liability insurance and encourages his supervisees to carry insurance as well.

Dr. Corson understands the value and importance of maintaining and enhancing professional skills. Therefore, he periodically participates in supervision of his supervision. Dr. Corson will inform supervisees through informed consent as to the purpose of his own supervision and that their actions may be discussed with the supervisor.

No fees are charged to any supervisee if supervision occurs as part of work related to Community Counseling of Central Connecticut Inc. For other supervisees, fees charged reflect the community standard and the supervisee's ability to pay.

Supervisees are provided with Dr. Corson's office address, email address, and office and home phone numbers. Supervisees are asked to call Dr. Corson at home if there is an emergent need after hours. Dr. Corson also provides each supervisee with the names and phone numbers of agencies that respond to crisis situations.

Dr. Corson follows the NBCC Code of Ethics and the Standards for the Ethical Practice of Clinical Supervision and provides a copy to all supervisees.
